My Dear Miss Whitney

I find that it will be impracticable for me to go over to Boston this Evening, and therefore I must decline your cordial and attractive invitation. It is necessary for me to preside at a Committee meeting until late this afternoon, and to be at my house in the early evening to receive two guests who are to call.

I am sorry that it so happens, for I am always delighted to see you and your guests.

Mrs Goodale gains very slowly and with many setbacks and discouragements. She had two bad turns last week and lost nearly all her courage, but she has again begun to improve.

She was much pleased with your kind message to her over the Telephone. She asks me to send you her love and all good wishes, and in every good wish I ask to join.

Yours faithfully

George Lincoln Goodale
